expert witnesses due to plaintiff's failure to meet the requirements set forth in Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 26. Joseph opposed the motion, stating that he intended to call two of his treating physicians as non-retained experts at trial. At a hearing on the issue, Magistrate Judge Hoffman ordered that the expert witnesses be excluded, after finding that the failure to disclose was neither substantially justified nor harmless.

In the instant motion, Joseph argues that Magistrate Judge Hoffman's order was clearly erroneous and contrary to law.

II. Legal standard

Magistrate judges are authorized to resolve pretrial matters subject to district court review under a "clearly erroneous or contrary to law" standard. 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(A); see also Fed. R. Civ. P. 72(a); D. Nev. R. 3-1(a) ("A district judge may reconsider any pretrial matter referred to a magistrate judge in a civil or criminal case pursuant to LR IB 1-3, where it has been shown that the magistrate judge's ruling is clearly erroneous or contrary to law."). "This subsection would also enable the court to delegate some of the more administrative functions to a magistrate, such as . . . assistance in the preparation of plans to achieve prompt disposition of cases in the court." Gomez v. United States, 490 U.S. 858, 869 (1989).

"A finding is clearly erroneous when although there is evidence to support it, the reviewing body on the entire evidence is left with the definite and firm conviction that a mistake has been committed." United States v. Ressam, 593 F.3d 1095, 1118 (9th Cir. 2010) (quotation omitted). "An order is contrary to law when it fails to apply or misapplies relevant statutes, case law or rules of procedure." Global Advanced Metals USA, Inc. v. Kemet Blue Powder Corp., 2012 WL 3884939, at *3 (D. Nev. 2012).

A magistrate's pretrial order issued under 28 U.S.C. § 636(b)(1)(A) is not subject to de novo review, and the reviewing court "may not simply substitute its judgment for that of the deciding court." Grimes v. City & Cnty. of San Francisco, 951 F.2d 236, 241 (9th Cir. 1991).

III. Discussion

Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 37(c)(1) provides, "If a party fails to provide information or identify a witness as required by Rule 26(a) . . . the party is not allowed to use that information or witness to supply evidence on a motion, at a hearing, or at a trial, unless the failure was substantially justified or is harmless." Joseph argues that Magistrate Judge Hoffman clearly erred in finding that the failure to disclose the non-retained experts was neither substantially justified nor harmless.

a. Substantially justified

Joseph's sole argument as to why the failure to disclose was substantially justified is that his attorney had not tried any cases in federal court since the 2010 amendment to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 26. This amendment created disclosure requirements for non-retained expert witnesses, such as treating physicians, who were not otherwise required to prepare a formal report. Prior to this change, the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure did not contain specific disclosure requirements regarding non-retained experts.

Nevertheless, Joseph's argument does not persuade the court that the failure to disclose was substantially justified. All parties practicing in federal court are responsible for knowing and adhering to the court's procedural requirements. In this case, Joseph allowed more than four months to elapse after the expert-disclosure deadline before giving any indication that he intended to call two of his treating physicians as non-retained experts. Thus, the court finds no error in Magistrate Judge Hoffman's ruling that the failure to disclose was not substantially justified.

b. Harmless

Joseph asserts that Magistrate Judge Hoffman clearly erred in finding the failure to disclose was not harmless. Joseph urges the court to consider the factors laid out in Olaya v. Wal-Mart Store, Inc., 2012 WL 3262875 at *3 (D. Nev. Aug. 7, 2012). These factors are: (1) prejudice or surprise to the party who the evidence is offered; (2) the ability of that party to cure the prejudice; (3) the likelihood of disruption of the trial; and (4) bad faith or willfulness involved in not timely disclosing the evidence. Id.

Joseph claims that there was no prejudice or surprise to Hartford because Joseph disclosed a list of more than 60 medical providers and over 1400 pages of medical records prior to the deadline. However, Joseph neglected to indicate which, if any, of the medical providers would be used as expert witnesses. In order to prepare for trial, one of Hartford's retained experts reviewed and analyzed the entirety of the 1400 pages. Because Hartford examined all of the records, Joseph argues, there was no prejudice or surprise when Joseph later declared that two of his treating physicians would testify as non-retained experts.

Joseph's reasoning would have the court punish Hartford for its own diligence. It was not Hartford's responsibility to scour through more than 1400 pages of medical records in order to predict whom Joseph might call as an expert witness. Though Hartford did examine all of the records, it was prejudiced by the fact that plaintiff's failure to disclose created the need to do so.

Magistrate Judge Hoffman ruled that plaintiff's failure created enough prejudice to warrant the exclusion of the expert witnesses. The court finds that this ruling was not clearly erroneous.

c. Bad Faith

Joseph argues that Magistrate Judge Hoffman's order was contrary to law because exclusion of the witnesses would be akin to summary judgment in Hartford's favor. Joseph argues the court may not exclude these witnesses unless there is a finding of bad faith.

Hartford urges the court to rely on Yeti by Molly, Ltd. v. Deckers Outdoor Corp., 259 F.3d 1101, 1106 (9th Cir. 2001). The Yeti court recognized that exclusion of the defendants' damages expert would make it "almost impossible" for the defendants to rebut the plaintiffs' damages allegations, but held that exclusion was an appropriate remedy for failing to fulfill expert disclosure requirements, without requiring proof of bad faith. Id. Therefore the fact that Magistrate Judge Hoffman, without a finding of bad faith, ruled that plaintiff's failure warranted the exclusion of his non-retained experts was not in error.
